

New Caledonia

(1859-)

An island in the southwest Pacific Ocean, approximately 1,000 miles northeast of Sydney, Australia. New Caledonia was annexed by France in 1853 and administered from Tahiti until 1860, when it became a separate colony. In 1984 France granted internal autonomy to New Caledonia, with the possibility of eventual independence. Direct French authority was reestablished in 1988, with the promise of a referendum on self-government being held in 1998.
