Sir Rowland Hill (1795-1879), described as the father of modern philately, was a far-sighted pioneer of the mail communications network in use throughout the world today. He was the originator of the postal system based on pre-paid postage, started by the British Post Office in 1840. British postage stamps were used in St Vincent from 1858-1861, and Grenadine islanders were obliged to use the St Vincent service until the first post office was opened in Bequia in 1894.

Current postage stamps of the Grenadines of St Vincent reflect the artistic beauty of modern stamp design and are to be displayed in London in May 1980. The stamps of the Grenadines of St Vincent philatelists meet to pay tribute to Rowland Hill's human
