 EUROPA

DISCOVER A NATURAL WONDERLAND

There is always something new to be discovered on Herm, the jewel in the Channel Islands' crown.

Although you can walk round the island in rather less than two hours it is constantly captivating. No two moments are the same.

The changing tides, light and seasons create new views, colours and textures.

You can crash beaches, search countless rock pools and cross newly exposed causeways to reach rocky islets.

You can watch flocks of terns and migratory birds, glimpse fish in the clear waters and spy wild flowers in profusion without ever meeting borders of people. Even at the height of summer Herm never becomes overcrowded.

The fact that the island is just one and a half miles long makes its diversity all the more remarkable and all the more accessible.

Perhaps that's why so many of our visitors return year after year to discover it all over again.

Herm Our Island Jewel
 EUROPA

Just after World War II, with no post office, Herm had no way of sending mail to Guernsey and beyond. An agreement was reached with the British Post Office that the island could operate its own service, printing its own carriage labels (there were much ado with Guernsey about the use of words such as "stamps" and "postage"), which would at least get the post across to its sister island. In 1949 the first set of labels appeared and the name of Herm duly travelled the world.

The labels brought much-needed revenue until in 1969 the Guernsey Post Office took control of its own affairs and opened a sub-post office in Herm.

The larger part of the stamp design features the Small Heath butterfly with Harnester in the background, while the 6d. (six pre-decimal pence) carriage label shows a Red Admiral and a Painted Lady.

When Peter and Jenny Wood took over the tenancy of Herm in 1949 the island was derelict and overgrown. Despite this, they saw in an instant that this was their destiny. It was hard work, but they set about their task with gusto, gradually enhancing the countryside, repairing the buildings and making the island fit for visitors.

As soon as the Woods opened the island to the public, the Bailiwick of Guernsey gained a wonderful new attraction which has captured the hearts of thousands over the years. Throughout the summer countless visitors catch a ferry for the short trip to a different world.

The larger part of the stamp design features the Variegated Scallop, Dogwhelk, European Coriander and Painted Topshell, which can be found around the island's coast including Shell Beach, named for the amazing variety of shells washed up by the Gulf Stream. The one shilling (equivalent to five new pence) carriage label shows the Garfish and the Italian Wrasse.

Herm is an island off Guernsey's east coast, 15 minutes away by boat. Just one and a half miles long and half a mile wide, the landscape ranges from cliffs to a flat, sandy coastline, with several beautiful beaches.

This is a place that offers respite from the hectic pace of modern life.

Holidaymakers lucky enough to spend a week or two here can't help but relax in such a gentle atmosphere, where days are spent walking, swimming, reading or just thinking.

Even Guernsey people, with their own beautiful island to enjoy, can be found in Herm during the summer, taking a break from reality and dropping down a gear.

The larger part of the stamp design features the Burnet Rose on dunes behind Shell Beach, one of many species which flourish here, while the four-doubles (halfpenny) old unit of currency) carriage label shows the Yellow Horned Poppay, Yellow Flag Iris and Wallflower.

Herm makes an admirable subject for this year's Europa issue, Nature Reserves and Parks. When the States of Guernsey bought the island from the British Government in 1946 and set about finding a tenant to run it, the following proviso was imposed: "That the governing principle in the control to be exercised by the States over the administration of Herm shall be to ensure that the natural attractions and peacefulness of that island are preserved and are made available to all who visit it".
